Virtual and stereoscopic anatomy: when virtual reality meets medical education

Jose Weber Vieira de Faria, MD, PhD¹, Manoel Jacobsen Teixeira, MD, PhD², Leonardo de Moura Sousa Júnior, MD³, Jose Pinhata Otoch, MD, PhD², and Eberval Gadelha Figueiredo, MD, PhD²

ABSTRACT

The authors sought to construct, implement, and evaluate an interactive and stereoscopic resource (Virtual Reality) for teaching neuroanatomy, accessible from personal computers.

RESULTS

The authors conclude that this method promoted further improvement in knowledge for students and fostered significantly higher learning when compared with traditional teaching resources.
